

The University of South Carolina does not effectively inform students about allergens in dining hall food, putting those with allergies at risk and limiting their meal options.